Webb, the composer of such legendary hits as "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Wichita Lineman," and "MacArthur Park," to name a few, breaks down the creative process from coping with writer's block, to song construction, chords and even self-promotion to provide the new bible of songwriting. Publisher: Hyperion.

Tunesmith by Jimmy Webb | Waterstones

"Jimmy Webb has been famous for his words for more than 50 years as the Grammy-winning songwriter behind classics such as "By the Time I Get to Phoenix" and "MacArthur Park." But when it came time to begin writing his memoir, The Cake and the Rain Webb says he discovered a freedom of expression that he hadn't felt before — one that comes outside the constraints of a three-minute pop song."

Jimmy Webb is undoubtedly one of pop's great craftsmen writers. Not a great singer in his own right, his songs lend themselves to a variety of interpretive approaches. That being said, this collection yokes in various artists versions of Webb's material, and it is a bit patchy (a bit like my hair these days).
